Dear parent/guardian,

Re: National Crime Agency Information: Sextortion

All schools in the UK have recently been sent information from the National Crime Agency, raising awareness of the recent rise in reporting of financially motivated sexual extortion (a type of online blackmail often known in the media as 'sexortion'). Children and young people worldwide are being targeted.

Within our two schools, all children receive RSHE (Relationships, Sex and Health Education), PSE (Personal and Social Education) and E-safety lessons as part of the curriculum. The content of these lessons is planned progressively and is appropriate to the age of the children (full details are on our website). We will also plan lessons in response to the particular circumstances of the class. As such, we are confident that the children are very well informed about issues relating to E-safety.

I am sharing a template letter from the National Crime Agency, which contains further information and signposts to a number of sources of information and support.

Yours sincerely,

Mr M. Walker
